Letter from Umatilla.

UMATILLA, July 5th, 1867.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

A report having been circulated in this county, that at the Fourth of July celebration, which took place on the Umatilla river, fourteen miles from here, I unjustifiably took the platform and made a political speech, I wish to say that it is utterly false. According to the programme the Marshal of the day, Mr. N. B. Evans, announced that "if there were any who had sentiments to express, or toasts to read to come forward." He knowing that I had some sentiments to express and that several toasts had been handed to me, gave me also one of his own toasts to read, and requested me to go ahead, stating for there no introduction would be necessary, I took the stand and made the following not political but loyal remarks, which I desire you to publish in order to set myself right before the community and my friends.

H. STORRS STONE.

Ladies and Gentlemen, Friends and Countrymen:

We have assembled together once again on this great and memorable day, the ninety-first anniversary of our National Independence; this day, which has been handed down to us by our forefathers with all the blessings attendant with freedom and liberty; this fourth of July made doubly dear to us from the fact that the strong arm and majesty of our Government has been tested, and proven powerful, when, as it has been, sustained by the loyalty and bravery of its citizens.

We have just emerged from the turmoils and horrors of bloody strife, when Mars, the God of War, was in his element, hurling his thunderbolts in rapid storms, on this once peaceful land;

(Here I was interrupted by "a thing" of brute instincts and bravado—James O. Dow, Jr., the editor of the Columbia Press—with the following low, vulgar, and blackguard denunciation: "Mr. Stone, you are a scoundrel, thief and liar, and if it were not that there are ladies present, you should meet me at ten paces." You may imagine my astonishment; not wishing to lower myself in the estimation of the assembly by handying words with such a person, I merely replied: "Colonel Dow, I did not disturb your oration; and you should not disturb me;" and I proceeded with my remarks.)

And Satan, in the form of foul treason, was skulking stealthily around our strong-holds assiduously sucking the life-blood from the Goddess of Liberty. We have, I say, just emerged from a fratricidal yet compulsory war, where freedom and liberty were on the one side, and slavery and misery were arrayed on the other. And how glorious was freedom's victory, breaking asunder the captives' chains, destroying the auction block and whipping post, giving full freedom to the press and freedom of speech, such as was never known before.

Again, I say, is this duty doubly clear to us. Our Union is now cemented together—not only by the blood of our forefathers, but by the lives of thousands of noble patriots who have recently fell as martyrs for the preservation of our Government and our liberties. Their names will be handed down, honored and worshipped by future generations for all time to come, for having crushed out base rebellion from our land, and base quashing to us the most generous, magnanimous, and glorious Government under the sun—a Government that is superior to all others—worshipped by the free Union-loving people. A Government of freedom that is the admiration of the world.

We have now our duty plainly before us. In the words of the illustrious Washington, we should guard our institutions of liberty with a jealous eye! and be vigilant and active when encroached upon or assailed by an enemy, and endeavor to preserve with our utmost powers the peace and harmony that now exists. We have a lamp by which our feet are to be guided, and that lamp is the lamp of experience, and by that light to extricate ourselves from all dangers of internal strife, and place us on a smooth road by which we will reach the highest pinnacle of happiness, possible for a free people only.

Let this duty ever be hailed with shouts of rejoicing, unfurling of banners and firing of cannon—remembering at the same time the eighth day of April, 1865, when our eagle, the emblem of liberty, again spread its wings o'er our then convulsed land, and heralded with screams of delight, freedom and liberty for one and for all, now and forever more.

The future is bright and radiant with hope; with peace at home and friendship of nations abroad, our commerce daily increasing with the richest countries of the West. The iron horse soon to unite us more closely with our friends of the East; with net work of telegraphs to converse with the world as quick as thought; our harvest yielding abundant crops to feed the multitudes that hunger; with resources more than adequate to the demand. Surely we are a blessed people. And while we are enjoying these blessings, let us remember that the foundation of our happiness is the unity of States, upholding our glorious stars and stripes with true patriotism and fidelity, standing by the flag when assailed, with brave hearts and strong hands, with our motto indelibly inscribed thereon, "United we stand, divided we fall," "Give us liberty or give us death."

—These are the toasts that were smothered down for fear that they might be considered politics. It is the most unkindest cut of all to one who has helped to fight for the freedom we now enjoy, not to be allowed to express publicly, loyal sentiments on the Fourth of July, for fear of displeasing some unrepentant rebel who was too cowardly to go South and fight with those with whom he sympathized;

United States of America—The glorious union of States, cemented together by the blood of our forefathers and preserved by the patriotism and valor of our soldiers; made permanent by the people through Congress, she will be a paragon of freedom and liberty to the world for all time to come.

Uncle Sam—An infant at Yorktown, a boy at New Orleans, a man at Mexico and a giant at Richmond.

Our Navy—

> The fleetest ships on Time's memory,
> The greatest deeds on the page of history;
> Victorious ever in the main,
> In crushing out base rebellion's stain,
> Astonishing the world in times of war,
> With valiant power, springs forth the Monitor,
> And for freedom strikes with shot and shell,
> Breaking asunder foul treason's spell.
> With patriotic seamen ever true and brave,
> Nail Heat our flag o'er land and wave.

Our Noble Generals—As they have crushed rebellion by their bravery, driven treason from our land with their swords, so may they preserve peace due regard for humanity, and guard the Union with justice and humanity.

George Washington, the Father of his Country—Veteran Christian in defense of Freedom and Liberty; his name will ever remain fresh and sacred in the memories of the American people as the first in war, the first in peace, and the first in the hearts of all Union loving citizens.

Our Country—The greatest Government under the sun; let our object be, our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country; as by the blessing of God that country has itself become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace, of liberty, upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever.

The day we celebrate, Fourth of July, 1776—The dawning of freedom on this our far-famed land; the glorious birth of liberty to a christian nation, brought into existence by patriots of true hearts and noble deeds, handed down to their children as a priceless gift to ever be maintained and preserved.

Fourth of July, 1867—The full enjoyment of freedom in the American republic, the greatest blessing of liberty to one and all throughout the Union, made lasting by the martyrdom and sacrifices of Union loving spirits; freedom and liberty, united and inseparable, now and forever.

One of the most disgraceful exhibitions of religious fanaticism is the persecution of the Jews in the new State of Roumania, instigated by a Ministry whose members heretofore laid claim to the name of Liberals. The Government of France and England acted nobly in promptly and energetically interfering in behalf of the persecuted Jews.

The number of arrests for drunkenness in London last year was 8,782. In New York, with one-third the population, the yearly arrests for intoxication number 15,000. In London one-half the arrests are of women; in New York, one-fourth.

Letter from Coos County.

EMPIRE CITY, Coos Co., OREGON., July 13th, 1867.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

Allow me to make, through your columns, a few remarks on the business and resources of Coos county. Coos county is nearly bisected by Coos bay and river. The bay proper lays northeast and southwest mainly, with an elbow in the upper end running north and south; is 14 miles long by from 1 to 2 miles wide, with 14 to 17 feet water on the bar at high tide. The entrance is adorned with a fine lighthouse, which includes a revolving light of the second class.

EMPIRE CITY

is located on the south shore of the bay, four miles from the entrance, is the county-seat of Coos county, containing the county buildings and county offices, three stores, two hotels, shops, &c., and new schoolhouse and hall of Good Templars, a thriving population and the fine steam mill of H. H. Luse, which is really the base of operations of the city. Here are two organized churches, a revenue agent, and it is said only one indictment has been found by the grand jury for the last two years in the county. Business is in a prosperous condition.

NORTH BEND,

five miles above Empire City, on the same shore, is the leading point on the bay in the lumber business. A. M. Simpson has a fine mill at this place, which turns out thirty or forty thousand feet per day, which he ships in his own vessels to San Francisco. He has on the ways now, nearly completed, the largest sailing vessel ever built on the Pacific coast, which is the fourth vessel he has built at North Bend.

lies some three miles above north bend on the same side of the bay, and is just coming into note on account of the new steam mill nearly complete and of a large class, and as being in the vicinity of the Coos Bay coal beds, from which they ship 600 tons of coal per month to San Francisco. Coal prospects are abundant on the divide between Coos Bay and the Coquille river, which at present is enlisting considerable interest. There is also some interest taken in the gold mines in the southwest part of the county, on the beach at Randolph, supposed to be a number of very rich claims, but they are all taken, and it is necessary to drift 100 feet before they strike the pay. One claim is paying well. Coos river, extending inland some twenty miles from the head of the bay, affords fine bottoms for farming and gardening. Just at present the project of building a new wagon road from the head of the bay to Roseburg is under discussion, which, complete, would add greatly to the facilities of trade. F.

NOT BAD.—About forty years ago there lived in Western Pennsylvania two farmers named Wood and Osborne, respectively. They were near neighbors, but inveterate enemies; and it is said they lived almost in sight of each other for fourteen years without speaking to each other. Wood one day went out with a mattock to dig up half a dozen stumps that had never yet been removed from his meadow; but finding it pretty hard work, and moreover, not being very fond of work, he gave it up and returned to the house. On the way it occurred to him that by a cunning device he might induce his unfriendly neighbor to uproot the little annoyances. Acting on a bright idea that occurred to him, he entered his house, got his writing materials, and, in a disguised hand, wrote:

Mr. Wood: I am an old man, fast approaching my end, and I cannot go to my grave without revealing to you a secret. When I was a young man I helped to rob your grandfather of a large amount of money. I and my partner in crime buried five thousand dollars of it under the roots of a tree in the meadow that now belongs to you. No doubt these trees have been cut down by this time, but the stumps may still remain. He was soon after hanged for a murder he committed, and I was sent to prison for highway robbery. I was but lately released, and I wish to do all I can to atone for past misdeeds. I send this letter by a person who says he knows where you live, and he will throw it into your house.

A REPENTANT CRIMINAL.

Wood sealed this bit of fiction, addressed it to himself, and, when night came, crept stealthily to Osborne's door, opened it a little way, tossed it in, and ran away as though Satan were after him. On reaching home he retired to rest and reposed sweetly till morning. When he rose he cast a glance toward his meadow, and to his satisfaction, discovered every stump in his meadow had been dug up during the night and pulled out by the roots. After breakfast he went coolly to work and rolled them together in a pile, in order to burn them. And imagine Osborne's bitterness of heart as he passed by on his way to the village that morning, saw Wood thus engaged, and knew how he had been duped by him.

THE WHOLE HOG ON THE TRICHINA QUESTION.—The pork eaters can strengthen their distrust of the trichina theories by recalling what Dr. Reed of Baltimore says, and go on with their ham and sausages:

They do not inhabit the muscle of the hog more than that of any other animal, or of man himself. I defy any one to prove by the record of the last thirty-five years that a solitary death has been caused beyond doubt by the presence of trichina. I assert that the charges made against these innocent worms are without shadow of a foundation in fact, and would advise the community, if they desire to eat pork, to do so.

Tomatoes need more care in the watering than any other vegetable; when the plants are first put out, they should be transplanted into wet beds, as for cabbage; then see that they are erect before irrigating, and let on the water slowly, taking care not to cover the crowns of the plants; and at no time let two inches of water on your plants, or they will wither or stop growing entirely; tomatoes need water often to get an early crop, but in very limited quantities.

The Rebellion Record, commenced in 1861 by Frank Moore, will now soon be completed, having reached about 16,000 pages, and had a sale of over 300,000 copies. It is now giving the rebel official accounts of the great battles and other events of the war, and altogether presents all the chief materials for the future historian of our great war. No other war had ever such full and reliable record made of itself.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 23, 1867.

Our Own State.

It is not expected that human beings will be satisfied with any situation they can ever attain, or that they will cease to look far away for something better than they have ever been able to reach. There are many people in Oregon to day who are a prey to a spirit of discontent, and who talk of going elsewhere; and on the other hand it is the universal testimony of those who, after remaining here for a length of time have then gone to live somewhere else, that Oregon, all things considered, is about the best country they ever found. Who ever knew an old resident of Oregon, in any other country, who was not anxious to return to his former home? Many Oregonians have tried the change, and nearly all of them have either returned or longed for an opportunity to get back. Is there not a lesson here? If it were possible for those who allow themselves to wander from one place to another continually, without ever finding contentment, to learn any lesson on this subject, they might find it in this fact.

If a comparison is instituted between Oregon and any of the older States, the advantages, at least for the laboring classes, will unquestionably be found here. For it is an undisputed fact that a person in this State may by his labor secure an independent position sooner than in any of the older States. Not only is labor better rewarded here, but it is a fact also that all the necessary means for a life of comfort and enjoyment may be obtained here at lower prices than in the eastern or middle portions of the country. Here, industry may soon secure a competence. There, the severest application can only give the laborer and his family a support for the passing day. This must be the case in all densely populated localities. Here, there is opportunity for every one to accumulate something beyond the necessary cost of living. Industry here may therefore look forward with certainty to future independence; while in the older States there are not half the advantages for labor which are here offered.

These are considerations which are not only worthy of the attention of people now here who may be dissatisfied with their situation, but also of those in other parts of the country who may be anxious to better their condition by removal. There is room here. The strong hand of labor cannot fail to find material to convert into wealth. There are innumerable industries which we ought to have that are not even represented here. How much better, then, the opportunity for the laborer in the Pacific States than in those places where every occupation is full, and where labor injures itself by the great competition it creates and maintains.

A Question of Damages.

Mr. Horace Greeley has swung so far around the circle that he has reached the Democratic position of affirming that levying war against the United States is not treason against them. So singular are the effects produced by that famous gyratory movement of which Mr. Johnson is inventor. Mr. Greeley holds that Jefferson Davis has condoned the crime of rebellion by the magnitude of the slaughter, and that he is therefore now entitled to distinguished consideration. This sounds curious enough to those who have read in Greeley's history his terrible censures of Buchanan and his advisers for making any difference between a great rebellion and a small one, and for putting the two on wholly different grounds.

If this Democratic doctrine which the New York Tribune has espoused, and which it continues to advocate with unremitting vigor, be true, Davis is a most deeply injured man, and the Government ought by all means to make him decent reparation. The benevolent philosopher of the Tribune should not stop at the point he has reached, but should make himself active in securing damages for one who has been so foully dealt with. Perhaps the Tribune's next suggestion will be that Davis ought to sue the Government, and that he is clearly entitled to recover. At what figure shall the damages be fixed? They ought by all means to be exemplary, so that this Government will not again have the temerity to "abridge the liberty of a citizen" on an occasion so trifling. How cheering it would be to see the "rights of the citizen" vindicated and Democratic principles justified by a verdict for Davis, giving him the largest damages on record! As the whole subject has been narrowed down so that it is now, practically, only a question of damages, we may reasonably expect that it will be settled soon.

A National Party.

The late address issued by the National Republican-Union Committee, shows that the importance of making that party national in its organization is fully appreciated. The efforts which are being made to extend its organization in the States from which it has hitherto been excluded, also afford proof that it comprehends the political situation and sees the necessity of unfurling its banner in every State. Heretofore the force of circumstances has made it a sectional party. This was not its fault, and so long as these circumstances continued, there was no ground for a charge of sectionalism against it. But now that the spirit of hostility and intolerance which kept it out of the Southern States has been beaten down, it must become a national party; that is to say, it must have an existence in every State, if it is to remain in possession of national power. The force of this truth is generally felt, and the party is therefore extending its organization into the Southern States with an energy and rapidity that promise the most successful results. Its aims and principles have always been as broad as the Union; equally wide-reaching has its organization become. It will show astonishing strength in the South in the next elections. Even in Kentucky, the State now most unfriendly to its measures, it commands nearly one third of the entire vote. It can never again, with even a semblance of truth, be denominated by its opponents a sectional party.

The following dispatch giving the opinion of General Grant on the Reconstruction Act is more explicit than that published by us a few days ago. It is an order sent by General Grant to General Ord, dated June 23d: "Your final instructions to the Board of Registration, dated June 10th, are received. I entirely dissent from the views contained in telegram four. Your view as to the duty of Registers to register every man who will take the required oath, though they may know the applicant perjures himself, is sustained by the views of the Attorney General. My opinion is that it is the duty of the Board to see, so far as in its power, that no unauthorized person is allowed to register. To secure this, Registers should be allowed to administer oaths and to examine witnesses. The law, however, makes district commanders their own interpreters of their power and duties under it, and in my opinion the Attorney General or myself can no more than give an opinion as to the meaning of the law. Neither can we enforce them against the judgment of those made responsible for the faithful execution of the law, the district commanders."

Opinion in the "Match Fraud" Case.

United States District Court, District of Oregon, July Term 1867—United States vs. J. F. Walsh. Action to recover penalties. This action was commenced by filing complaint on May 23d 1867. On the same day an order for the arrest of the defendant was allowed at chambers. On May 27th, 1867, the defendant was arrested and gave bail to the action in the sum of $800. On On the tenth of July following the defendant's counsel filed a motion to vacate the order allowing the arrest.

This motion was made and argued as the cause was called for trial. The trial proceed, while the decision of the motion was reserved for further consideration. On the trial a verdict was given for the plaintiff for the sum of $800.

The grounds of the motion are

1st. Because the order was improperly made.

2d. Because the affidavit was insufficient.

3d. Because there is no undertaking for the writ.

The complaint is verified by the oath of the informer, S. P. Reed, and charges that the defendant, on April 23, 1867, did manufacture and sell eight packages of friction matches, without stamping the same or either of them as required by the statutes of the United States, and at so, that on May 1st, 1867, did in like manner manufacture and sell eight other packages of friction matches.

At the time of allowing the order of arrest there was also filed the separate affidavit of the informer, containing substantially the same facts as the complaint, except that the articles therein alleged to have been manufactured and sold, were described simply as matches, without being designated as either lucifer or friction matches.

Section 9, of the Internal Revenue Act, of July 13, 1866, requires that lucifer or friction matches shall be stamped as prescribed in schedule C, and imposes a penalty of fifty dollars for every omission to affix such stamp. Counsel for the defendant maintains that this affidavit is insufficient to authorize the order of arrest, because it does not specifically allege that the matches manufactured and sold by the defendant without stamps, were either lucifer or friction matches.

The only kind of matches subject to stamp duty under the Internal Revenue act, are by that act designated or called lucifer or friction matches. Whether there are any other kinds of matches known to the arts or commerce, which are not subject to such duty, is a question of fact, of which I cannot take judicial knowledge. Ought I, in the absence of proof pro or con, to presume that there are other kinds of matches, not subject to duty, and that therefore the act stated in the affidavit, may or may not be a cause of arrest? I incline to think not. But admitting for the purpose of the argument that the affidavit is insufficient for want of certainty in this particular, it cannot affect this motion. Where the cause is sufficiently set forth in the complaint, and the cause of action and arrest are identical, there is no necessity for an additional or separate affidavit to authorize the order for an arrest. In this case, the cause of action and arrest are identical, and the statement of the facts in the complaint is sufficient for either purpose. The order allowing the arrest of the defendant may be made when it appears by affidavit, that a sufficient cause of action and arrest exists (Gen. Laws, 105). Upon the same principle, an execution is allowed against the body, without affidavit or other proof than the return thereof, when it appears on the record that the cause of action, on account of which the judgment was given, was also a cause of arrest (Gen. Laws 210).

The statute only requires that the facts necessary to authorize the order of arrest shall appear by affidavit. If the complaint shows a cause of action and no more—as that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff for money loaned—then it would be necessary to show by affidavit in addition to the complaint, that a cause of arrest exists also—as that the defendant obtained the loan by fraud.

The statute should not be so construed as to require the plaintiff to do a useless act to obtain the order. A verified complaint is in this respect an affidavit. It is a statement of facts, verified by the oath of the party making it. If it appears from such a complaint that there exists against the defendant both a cause of action and arrest, enough is shown to justify the order of arrest.

The objection, that no undertaking was given for the writ, to indemnify the defendant, will be next considered. The subject of arrest and imprisonment in civil actions in the courts of the United States is regulated by the acts of Congress, of February 28, 1839 and January 14, 1841, the latter being declaratory of the former. The first of those acts substantially provides that no person shall be imprisoned for debt on process issuing out of the courts of the United States, in any State in which by the laws of such State imprisonment for debt has been abolished, and that where imprisonment for debt was allowed upon conditions and restrictions, it should be allowed in like manner in the United States courts. This act was not prospective and therefore did not adopt the future legislation of the States. It was also held not to apply to actions in which the United States were plaintiff. On this latter account the act of January 14, 1841, was passed, which declared, that the act of February 28, 1839, should be construed to abolish imprisonment for debt in the United States courts, in all cases, where by the laws of the State, imprisonment for debt has been or shall hereafter be abolished.

This act is prospective in its terms, so far as future laws of the States abolishing imprisonment for debt, are concerned. Whether Congress has the power to adopt prospectively State legislation on any given subject, I do not propose to discuss. The power has been seriously questioned, and upon apparently good grounds, (2 Curtis C. C. and the authorities there cited). But the act of 1841, is silent concerning the future laws of the States imposing restrictions and conditions upon the allowance of imprisonment for debt. It does not purport to adopt them. The law of this State regulating arrest in civil actions, requires as a condition precedent to an arrest, that the plaintiff shall give an undertaking to pay the defendant "all costs that may be adjudged to him and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, if the same be wrongful or without sufficient cause, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking." (Gen. Laws 165-6.) This is a condition or restriction imposed upon the allowance of an order of arrest, and is not adopted by acts of Congress. The adoption of this law by a rule of court, might make it of force as a rule of court between private suitors, and even this is questionable. But the United States as plaintiff in an action could not be bound by such a law unless enacted or adopted by Congress. This court could not by rule require the United States to give security for costs, nor damages. The United States never pays costs to the adverse party, and it would not be bound by any undertaking entered into on its behalf to pay any one, unless authorized by act of Congress.

The objection that the order was improperly allowed, raises the question, whether the United States is entitled to arrest a defendant in an action for a penalty, in this State. The Constitution of this State (Bill of Rights, clause 19), enacts: "There shall be no imprisonment for debt except in case of fraud or absconding debtors." (Gen. Laws 99).

The law of this State provides, among other causes, that the defendant may be arrested on a civil "action for a fine or penalty." (Gen. Laws 164.)

Counsel for the defendant maintains that this act of the Legislative Assembly, is in this particular repugnant to the Constitution of the State, and therefore void. No decision of the Supreme Court is cited in support of this position and none is known to have been made.

The word debt is of very general use and has many shades of meaning. Looking to the origin and progress of the change in public opinion, which finally led to the abolition of imprisonment for debt, it is reasonable to presume, that this provision in the State Constitution was intended to prevent the useless and often cruel imprisonment of persons, who having honestly become indebted to another, are unable to pay as they undertook and and promised. In this view of the matter the clause in question should be construed, as if it read: "There shall be no imprisonment for debt arising upon contract express or implied, except, etc." Such is substantially the language employed in the Legislative acts, of most of the States, abolishing imprisonment for debt; and there can be but little doubt that this was the end which the framers of the Constitution had in view, as well as the popular understanding of the clause, when the instrument was adopted at the polls.

General or abstract declarations in Bills of Rights are necessarily brief and comprehensive in their terms. When applied to the details of the varied affairs of life, they must be construed with reference to the causes which produced them and the end sought to be obtained. A person who wilfully injures another in person, property or character is liable therefor in damages. In some sense he may be called the debtor of the party injured and the sum due for the injury a debt. But he is in fact a wrong doer, a trespasser, and does not come within the reason of the rule which exempts an honest man from imprisonment, because he is peculiarly unable to pay what he promised to. For instance, a person who wrongfully beats his neighbor, kills his ox or girdles his fruit trees, ought not to be considered in the same category as an unfortunate debtor. He ought to be liable to arrest in action for damages by the party injured. Deny him this remedy, and in the majority of such cases it would amount to a denial of justice, and a deliberate repudiation and disregard of the injunction contained in clause 19 of the Bill of Rights—"every man shall have remedy by due course of law for injury done him in person, property or reputation." It may be admitted that a penalty given by statute is technically a debt. It does not, however, arise upon contract, but by operation of law. It is imposed as a quasi punishment for the violation of law or the neglect or refusal to perform some duty to the public or individuals enjoined by law. Penalties are imposed in furtherance of some public policy and as a means of securing obedience to law. Persons who incur them are either in morals or law wrong doers, and not simply unfortunate debtors unable to perform their pecuniary obligations. I do not think the constitutional provision prohibiting imprisonment for debt was intended to apply to or include such cases. From these premises it follows of course that the act of the Assembly allowing the arrest of the defendant in an action for a penalty, is not in conflict with the constitution, and therefore valid and binding.

But admitting, for the sake of the argument, that these penalties are a debt within the meaning of the clause prohibiting imprisonment for debt, do they not come within the exception,—"except in case of fraud." The International Revenue act, required the defendant to affix a certain amount of stamps upon all the matches manufactured by him before selling the same or removing them for consumption or sale. As a means of enforcing or securing the payment of this tax, the act also imposed a penalty of fifty dollars upon the defendant for every omission to affix such stamp. The payment of this tax was a duty imposed upon the defendant by law. When he sold these sixteen packages of matches without affixing the stamps to them, he acted fraudulently. Thereby he cheated and defrauded the United States, the plaintiff in this action.

These penalties were incurred by this fraudulent act, and if they can be considered a debt within the meaning of clause 19 of the bill of rights, it is such a debt as falls exactly within the exception,—being in all intents and purposes, "a case of fraud," both in morals and law. Of course, in this respect there can be no distinction between cheating or defrauding the government of the United States, and an individual.

The order for the arrest was properly allowed, and the motion of defendant must be denied.

A young man, whose name was published as one of the rebel soldiers killed on the sanguinary field of Stone river, and whose funeral sermon was preached about a year ago, suddenly appeared to his friends at the old homestead, near Nashville, Tenn., a day or two since, just arriving in time to claim a share of the estate, which was to be divided to the heirs in a few days. He had been to California.

OWYHEE MINING ITEMS.

The following items are from the Avalanche of the 13th:

The Owyhee Company's mill has started up again after lying idle since last November. It is now in better trim than ever before. Some five weeks have been spent with a large force of men repairing it, and nearly every part came in for some improvement, so that it is quite a model of neatness as well as of mechanical order and system. The tailing-yard has been cleaned out, improved and enlarged. An ore yard in front of the mill is being constructed so as to give more and better room for advance supplies of ore. Some thousands of tons will be placed there before winter. The mill will not stop again except on Sundays and for incidental repairs. The machinery for the enlargement of its pan capacity will be here shortly, and the foundation and other work is being prepared to receive it. This addition once completed, the full twenty stamps will be kept going constantly. Everything about the mill is being made and improved especially with reference to working Poorman ore. R. H. Leonard has had full charge of the reconstruction, and a look around there shows him to be conversant with quartz mills and their conveniences.

The company is making an experiment in working the tailings by the Kent process. The tailings are first made into bricks, then calcined in a furnace and subsequently worked in barrels. If it proves profitable, works on a large scale will be constructed and the tailings all treated by this process.

POTOSI.

The Potosi ledge is producing rich ore and is forming more perfectly as the work progresses. The shaft is now down forty feet. A road is being dug so as to admit teams to the mine. When finished, a crushing of forty or more tons will be made. A number of assays shows a very high average value of the rock. The lowest assay gave $210 07, and several others ranged from $800 to $1,500. Silver largely predominates. The owners have taken measures to incorporate under the name of the "Potosi Gold and Silver Mining Company." Shares are placed at $100, and capital stock at $144,000. Trustees for the first three months are Chas. S. Pent, Michael Firebaugh and A. J. Cope. The company is determined to proceed with a thorough development of the mine.

The ore in the shaft of the Ore Fino mine at a depth of sixty feet from the old lower works is improving. The Morning Star mill has been supplied from it regularly. This mill will probably crush ten tons the coming week from the Glenbrook—a ledge owned by A. J. Sands and others. Mr. Sands showed us a small brick of the assayed value of $19 93, which was obtained from ten pounds of Glenbrook ore. We shall visit this ledge during the coming week, and note the points more particularly.

The Cosmos mill is grinding away on Silver Cord ore, and with favorable products. Mr. Lewis intends to substitute barrels for the pans as soon as possible, as the trials already made have convinced him of their great superiority in grinding and bringing all the pulp in contact with the quicksilver.

The Webfoot mill has been employed for over a week on ore from the Woodstock. It will not be long till this mine will employ a small mill constantly. The quality of the ore is improving—which is encouraging to the owners as well as to the public generally.

The following Indian news is from the same paper:

Indians made their appearance a few miles south of Silver, on Tuesday night, and drove off several head of stock and killed one animal. The trail was followed and found to bear south in the direction of where Col. Jennings and party had their fight about one year ago. The redskins are supposed to be in that vicinity now. If we are correctly informed, the commanding officer will start about one hundred men up the Owyhee next week, from Camp Winthrop, so Mr. Indian will be looked after in that as well as half-a-dozen other directions very soon.

DEATH OF GENERAL MEAGHER.—From the Helena (Montana) Herald of July 3d, we learn the particulars of the death of General Thomas Francis Meagher, Secretary of Montana Territory. As announced by telegraph, he was drowned at Fort Benton on the 1st of July, and at last accounts his body had not been recovered. The Herald has the following:

He having went on board the steamer A. G. Thompson, lying at the levee, to spend the evening and night of the 1st instant with some friends, was heard to get up from his couch during the night and go out of his stateroom on the guards. Upon hearing a splashing sound in the water, the passengers rushed out to find that one who had stood foremost among the few truly brilliant men of our country, and he who had taken so prominent a part in the administrative affairs of our young Territory—winning all hearts by his nobleness of natural purpose—had been swept down the terrible torrent, perhaps never again to be recovered even in death. He made no cries for help, nor was he seen after the fall; and all efforts to recover his body had, up to the leaving of the coach, proved fruitless. This is a bereavement in which not only those near and dear to the deceased will be bowed down with irrepressible grief, but many, very many, of his fellow citizens and fellow countrymen throughout the land will most sincerely mourn. We regret that circumstances prevent our dwelling upon this most lamentable calamity in words which we feel to be due to the occasion; but we must leave this to another time. Our profound and heartfelt sympathies go forth in condolence to that adored wife and noble lady, who, more than all the rest, must suffer the shock of this most sad and unwelcome intelligence.

PERFECTLY ENRAPTURING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which came from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like these? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world-wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments.

THE LAST POLICY.—My Policy, or President Johnson's Policy, is nothing when compared with the Policy ROHN & FISHEL, No. 31 Front Street, have inaugurated. They sell to their customers the best and most durable Clothing without misrepresentation, being confident that every article they sell will turn out as represented. They have a large stock of Beaver and Cassimere Suits on hand to which they challenge any other house to compete with them as regards price and quality.

ASTHMA.—This disease causes great difficulty of breathing, and tightness across the chest, and sometimes attended with a great deal of suffocation. The paroxysm generally comes on at night, while lying down; sometimes it is attended with great violence. Allen's Lung Balsam will always give immediate relief, and in many cases, if persevered in, it will cure the disease altogether. ARREST OF TWO ROGUES.—Captain Williams, deputy sheriff of Columbia county, arrived here yesterday by the Okanogan, having in charge two young men who, some days ago, robbed the house of David Culley who lives out on the Canyon road, and afterwards robbed the room of Gen. A. Ladd at St. Helens. On the strength of the report brought the other day from Monticello, that they had been met by the stage, they were followed by Capt. Williams and overtaken some miles beyond Pumphrey's station. He had no warrant issued by an officer of Washington Territory, but they were so much overcome by fear that he had little difficulty in inducing them to return. As soon as they reached Oregon, he placed them under arrest upon a warrant issued by Barney Treinor of East Portland, before whom they will have an examination this morning at 10 o'clock. A very nice revolver, a vest and a pair of pantaloons, stolen from Mr Culley, were recovered and brought back with the thieves. They also had several other articles which they confess are not their own but for which they decline to account. They are quite young men, little more than boys, and represent that they came recently from the States; were hard up; could get no employment, and were driven by necessity to stealing. They give their names as John Whelan and Frederick J. Danenha.

SWEPT BEANS.—For once, the vegetable market in this city is over full. A farmer stopped into a family provision store yesterday, to sell some green beans, when the following colloquy ensued:

Farmer—Want any beans?
Dealer—Beans? What for?
Farmer—To sell.
Dealer—To sell? To whom?
Farmer—Why to the folks, of course.
Dealer—What do the folks want of beans?
Farmer—Why to eat—what else could they want them for?
Dealer—Guess not: guess the folks don't eat beans. We can't give 'em away. We've tried it. There's a basket of 'em, we'll give you if you'll take 'em. If that don't suit, there's another basket; take them along too, and we'll thank you. Invite your neighbor to come in the morning, and we'll give him a basket of 'em. No, sir! we can't buy any beans. Really, we'd like to get rid of 'em, but we can't buy any beans.

Farmer, with more than a basketful of astonishment in his countenance, retired with his beans to his wagon, mounted and wended his way thoughtfully out of the city.

FROM BIG BEND.—From the D. C. Examiner, we get the following late news from Big Bend. A letter written on the steamer Forty-Nine, at Luporte, June 15th, says:

We had a heavy trip this time. We landed 40 head of beef cattle, 80 head of fat sheep, 16 pack animals, and some 15 tons of freight. We were five days from Colville. They charge $25 a head for beef and horses, $9 for sheep, and 10 cents per pound for freight, etc. The news is good from the mines. Every one is at work, and every one has got money. There are about 575 men in the mines, and more coming. We land 14 miles from the mines. A great many of the claims are just being opened, and some are paying. Old Black Hawk "will take out bushels of money, this season." He says so, and I think so. The same paper has dates from French Creek to June 28th, from which we take the following extracts: Big Bend is only just beginning to show up. Every claim that has gone down, has turned up trumps. Black Hawk and Howard have got a good thing. The latter took out 16 oz. in the last wash up. Capt. White intends building another boat. Was shown a nugget yesterday from the Nez Perce company, at the lower end of the creek, weighing 172 ounces. Expect big news from this quarter by every boat.

FROM ASTORIA.—An occasional correspondent at Astoria sends us the following items:

Mr. Stark, who was wounded a few days ago by the accidental discharge of a rifle, had his leg amputated on the 16th. He is now doing well.....The foundations of the Congregational church are completed and the framing of the building is progressing rapidly.....A Philharmonic Society was organized here last week.....The public school of this town has been conducted the last quarter, on a new and altogether novel plan. It is purely republican in its government; every pupil who was advanced enough to study practical arithmetic had a vote; they were the law makers; the teacher was the executive. The results were entirely satisfactory.....About $7,000 has been subscribed toward starting a boot factory.

THE OCCIDENTAL AND CLACKAMAS CLUBS.—Mr. Dellaff of the Pioneers, informs us that the Clackamas Base Ball Club yesterday concluded to challenge the Occidental Club to play the second game in their match, at Portland, any day during the present week which may suit the latter. The Clackamas Club first challenged the Vancouver boys to play them on their grounds at Oregon City. The latter declined to do this, but offered to play at Vancouver. The Oregon boys thought this not exactly the right thing between them, but concluded to accept and so arranged yesterday, the only way of getting there without losing too much time. Yesterday, however, it was found not practicable to go that way on account of high water, and hence, the resolution adopted to challenge the Occidentals to play at Portland.

A VERY TRUE FACT.—A man named Blackwell, who was arrested in Washington county some time last winter for drawing a revolver on a Mr. Dean, and placed under bond in the sum of two hundred dollars to answer at the next term of the Circuit Court, has been since at work for Mr. Samuel Rolfe, one of his sureties. Last Friday night, he stole Mr. Rolfe's horse and taking his own blankets, decamped. At eleven o'clock he was seen at Harrell's place about three miles from Forest Grove. Mr. Rolfe and Mr. Beal, who was also a surety for Blackwell, started yesterday morning in pursuit. The absconder is a small man, about 38 years old—an Irishman.

STREET WORK.—Mr. Branniff commenced yesterday morning to lay down the foundation rocks for the Meadow Bridge on Front street at its junction with Jefferson. The rocks used are from a quarry at Oswego, and are being selected to any hitherto used in street grading in this city, because harder and more generally flat in shape. The work now being done at this place seems to be of a very substantial character in all respects. The contractors expect to complete the job either this week or early next week. Messrs. Carter, Hayden & Co., are getting out a first class bridge roadway from Front street on the line of Jefferson, down to their buildings toward the river, the new sidewalk cutting off their old road.

CIRCUIT COURT SHATTUCK, JUDGE.—Proceedings of Monday, July 22d:

David H. Jackson vs. Benjamin Russell; judgment for plaintiff, by default, for want of answer, in the sum of $643 96, costs, and interest at two per cent. per month.

Asa and J. B. Harker vs. I. W. Case, et al; default set aside and defendant allowed to file answer within ten days.

T. J. McGowan vs. John W. Gates; jury empanneled and most of the day occupied in hearing testimony of witnesses.

N. Schuyler vs. Charles S. Fechheimer, et al; verdict of jury for plaintiff, in the sum of $300.

HANDSOME BUILDING STONE.—A large load of building stone taken from a quarry at or near Tongue Point on the lower Columbia river, arrived here yesterday morning. We did not learn to whom the cargo is consigned, but were told that the rocks were quarried for the purpose of being worked into window sills, cornices and other work of an ornamental character, for brick buildings. The stone is sand, is easily worked, and much of it is of the most beautiful grain, being streaked with green somewhat in some pieces, while others are variegated with gray and light brown. For the purposes designated, it would be difficult to find handsomer stone anywhere.

WHARF EXTENSION.—The work of piling for the long contemplated extension of Couch & Flanders' wharf was begun yesterday morning. The extension will be fifty feet down stream, and outward to the line of the old wharf. Double rows of piles are being driven, for an upper and a lower floor. The lower and outer corner will be very near the point where the old Dad de Lorges lay last summer. For the last year or two the old wharf has afforded too little room for the loading and unloading of the ocean steamers. This addition will, therefore, prove a great convenience to all concerned.

SOMETHING UNUSUAL.—It does not often happen that the city keeps out of the clutches of the police from Saturday till Monday. As a general thing somebody gets drunk Saturday and lands in the city jail through a fight or a row on the sidewalk. Yesterday morning, however, the police had not a single delinquency to report. The city went to bed sober and at an honest hour Saturday night; got up, put on its good clothes and went to church on Sunday; and so, started out this week with a clean face and not a blot on its record.

THE FANNIE TROUP.—The Williamette Iron Works has used great expedition in the repair of the Fannie Troup. The shaft will be ready to be put in to-day. Besides this, the works have turned out considerable other heavy work for the Troup, in addition to carrying on its accustomed work in other departments. Capt. Turnbull thinks he will get the Troup ready to run on Saturday. The repairs to her, including the new shaft, will amount to about $1,000, nearly all of which, except repairing, was found necessary by the breaking of her shaft.

MT. HOOD AND BACK.—The party which left here last Monday for the summit of Mt Hood, returned yesterday evening. They report heavy climbing on the mountain, and that they succeeded only in reaching a point within about one hundred feet of the highest point. Of the incidents and accidents of the trip, we have no account. The party consisted of Messrs. Waddleigh, Carpenter and two others whose names we have lost.

AN "UNFORTUNATE."—We heard yesterday that at a game of base ball at Vancouver on Saturday, between the Occidentals and the Sherman, an "unpleasantness" had resulting in several bats and scores not described in the National rules, and in the subsequent reconstruction of the Occidental club. We have it upon report, that Mr. Proebstel is thereby the successor of Mr. Mosher as Captain of the first nine.

BISHOP THOMPSON.—Bishop Thompson, of the M. E. Church, who came passenger by the Continental, will deliver the annual address before the graduating class of the Willamet University at Salem on Thursday, the 25th. He is also expected to assist in the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone of the M. E. Church in this city, some time next week. The ceremonies were postponed to await his arrival.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT—DEADY, JUSTICE.—Proceedings of Monday, July 22d:

United States vs. J. F. Walsh; motion of defendant's counsel to vacate warrant of arrest, denied.

Wm. Semple, Esq., was admitted to practice at the bar of the Court.

The Court adjourned without day.

THE FANNIE IRON WORKS.—We have been frequently asked within a day or two, about the time for the approaching annual meeting of the State Teachers' Institute. We have not had time to look the matter up, but we give Mr. Wilson's authority for the statement that the session will begin in Portland next Tuesday, the 30th.

DEPARTURE OF THE WHARVES.—The river has at length fallen low enough to uncover portions of Couch and Flanders' and the P. T. Co.'s wharves and they were used, yesterday, for receiving and discharging freights, for the first time in over two months. The river has rarely been known to keep up so long a time as it has this summer.

OPPOSITION.—A rumor was bandied about the streets yesterday, to the effect that the steamship Oregonian will be soon put on the Oregon route by her new owners, as part of an opposition line. The rumor is probably without any foundation in fact.

WHEAT—AS FREIGHT.—The Senator arrived from Oregon City yesterday with the following: 4 bales woolen goods, 1 case do, 2 pkgs sundries, 427 qr sks flour, 55 bales wool, 21 gunnies bacon, 10 half bbls dried apples, 4 boxes merchandise.

STANDARD MILLS.—We are informed that the water is expected to be low enough during the present week, to allow the Standard Mills at Milwaukie to start again.

BASE BALL PRACTICE.—The "Young Pioneers" will meet for practice this afternoon at half past four o'clock. Members are desired to be prompt.

ATTENTION.—The Wide-Awakes will practice this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Special meeting at half past eight.

TO BE SOLD CHEAP AND FOR CASH ONLY.—Barman Bros. will unpack to-day Cassimere suits that sold not more than three months ago for $35, which they will sell now at $20. This is a fact, and no opposition steamer rumor.

THE MAN WHO SAID THE Finnish Dye Colors manufactured by Howe & Stevens were the greatest discovery of the age for domestic use, hit the nail on the head precisely. By the same line of statement, Messrs. Howe & Stevens are among the greatest benefactors of the day. The great public evidently believe in the colors, for they are to be found in almost every well regulated household in the country.—Sold by Smith & Davis.

A SPLENDID INSTRUMENT.—We saw, yesterday, at J. L. Parrish & Co's something new in the way of an organ—a French instrument called the Organ Harmonium—invented by Alphonse Rodolphe. It is a very considerable modification of the organ as we have it from the American manufactories. It is provided with sixteen stops, each of which exercises a distinct and peculiar effect upon the tone. The bass stops are the Forte, Jeu Doux, (soft, sweet) Basson, Clarion, Bourdon, English Horn; the treble stops are Expression, Tremolo, Scotch Zeppine, Flute, Clarionette, Fife, Hautbois, Voix Celeste, Forte, and Knee or Full Expression. The effect of these stops in changing the tone is most surprising. For instance: from the flute to Voix Celeste with Full Expression, the tone changes from what sounds precisely like a soft flute, to the full grand harmony which we would expect from an Angel choir—when the same imparts. The Key-Board is movable and can be adjusted to suit any instrument, or to the voice of any singer. Other changes are no less surprising. The instruments are of the most perfect workmanship and of the highest finish; have taken the first medals at all the great European Expositions. The prices range from $175, to $600. Persons in want of an instrument should call and see them, for it is impossible to get a correct idea of them, except from personal inspection. J. L. Parrish & Co., are sole agents for the Pacific coast.

Angling to Some Purpose.

The custom which our fashionable Englishmen have of flying to the coast of France, when debts and the like mishaps render their own country somewhat too hot to hold them comfortably, causes Boulogne and other towns forming the chief places of rendezvous on such occasions, to present, for the most part, a strangely assorted society, and to witness at times, very curious scenes. We do not precisely ask our readers to believe the following romantic story in all its details, though there is nothing very improbable in any part of them.

Sir George Tindal was a young baronet of good English family, who came to Boulogne some years ago under peculiar circumstances. He had been left young with command of a good patrimonial estate, but had given away so far to the fashionable follies of the young in high life, as to allow nearly the whole of it to fly away on the turf as fast as race horses could carry it. He had still good expectations, however. A maternal relative, a merchant, and one of the richest in the metropolis, was likely in due course of things to leave Sir George his fortune, as his nearest heir. He was fond of the young man, but had been greatly and previously ruinated by the conduct and reverses of the latter. It was while meditating on this subject that an idea struck the nearly ruined baronet. "How successful," thought he, "my uncle has been by his speculations in the funds? Might not I have a chance that way also? Might not I cast in my poor remnant of means into that great lottery and pull out a prize? I may as well try it; all I have now is scarcely worth thinking twice about. I shall try that at least.

Poor Sir George! He forgot that though some seas may be deep, there are others which cannot be sounded at all; that however deep one may be in the mire, there is a chance of going deeper. He did venture all his stocks. He was successful once, and even twice. Getting inspirited by his good fortune, he thought that he had but to venture further and win more. Alas! he was a novice, merely, in the hands of veteran gamblers. Some of the very worst members of the body who speculate in these matters, got him into their hands; and knowing well what his expectations were, and where they lay, they led him by a nibble or two, until by a series of transactions, they at length got him placed under a load of debt, which his uncle's means would with difficulty lighten. Holding him bound with signatures and bonds, they then waited coolly for his accession to his prospective inheritance, knowing well that their victim was also within reach of their grasp at any time.

Sir George wandered about town for some months, after those mishaps, like a man with a rope around his neck. During that time he had many reasonings with himself on an important point. This point affected his whole prospective fortune. The young baronet was naturally possessed of good sense; he was well educated, and it may be said his heart was good, and his intentions fair toward all men under ordinary circumstances; but his course of life and the associations he had formed had relaxed his moral principles. This acquired defect now came into play. The point which he canvassed with himself was, whether or not, after having most distinctly ascertained that he had been the dupe of his creditors, his engagements with them were binding upon him. His good sense said yes, for they had enacted within the law; his sense of honor said the same, for they had his bonds; "but then," said other internal arguers, "they got these by base means, and they have not lost a shilling by me. The article experience was what my folly bought from them at the price of a fair fortune, and with it came no penny out of their pockets. Besides, if I pay these harpies, I shall be beggared." The end of the whole was, that the uncle of Sir George died; the young baronet was left heir; and within a few hours after being put in possession of his fortune, which was the post-obit one of an old money-hoarder, the young baronet was on his way with it to Boulogne. The creditors stormed and vowed revenge, but they at first knew not whither he might fly; and there are great difficulties attending the recovery of money from creditors on the continent, in any case.

Sir George fixed himself in a small country-house near Boulogne. He had been able to carry thither a sufficiency for permanent maintenance—above £20,000, nearly the amount of his funded embarrassments, after what he called "fair debts" were privately settled. He lived for some time in great seclusion, only occasionally in public. The society he then met was not of a character to trouble itself much about what he had done, or was about to do, so long as he maintained a fashionable appearance and gentlemanly deportment. So Sir George led a quiet and undisturbed existence, always excepting some twinges from a sense of violated honor, until love, the universal busybody, came in the way to overthrow the runaway's repose. A lady made her appearance in Boulogne, bearing the name and style of the Baroness d' Estival. Report said she was an English woman by birth, and the widow of a foreign nobleman; and she was young and beautiful and reported rich.

... long such attractions brought all the dangling Boulogne into subjection to the ... among the rest, our baronet saw and ... the lady. For a time, however, he ... distinguished by her; nor did he make ... marked advances on his own part. An accident brought about an entrée for him. By a ... piece of awkwardness as it seemed on the ... of her servant, the ... broke of the baroness ... was run ... overturned near Sir George's door- ... carriage sprang out; and the lady appearing in ... fled, he entreated her to ... for a few moments. She complied. ... it was the hour of lunch, and they lunched together. Sir George begged her to view his garden, and they walked together. When the lady was at last able to depart, Sir George begged leave to take the reins out of the hands of the awkward servant and escort her home in person. The result of all was that the baronet became an established visitant of the baroness; and having declared his passion, received an answer which left him much to hope, while at the same time it promised nothing positive.

Sir George could not be long acquainted with the fair baroness without discovering that she had one remarkable and somewhat eccentric taste; she was distractedly fond of angling—a perfect female Walton. She had hired for the season a large yawl, something between a fishing boat and a yacht, and every morning, when the water was good, she rose with the sun to amuse herself off the coast with the rod.

"I cannot comprehend the pleasure you take in this occupation," said Sir George in a kind tone, one day.

"It is a charming recreation," answered she gaily; "and, besides, my physicians have recommended to me to take as much air and exercise at sea as possible. I acquired the taste through this cause. It is sometimes dull, to be sure, for the sailors and my servants are no company. But I have been pressed by a certain gallant major; and a certain warlike colonel, to permit them to bear me company, and I think I must consent some day." How could a lover forbear to entreat permission to occupy the place of these rival suitors? Sir George could not. He begged and sued, and the fair lady gave her consent that he should accompany her next morning on one of her excursions.

The day proved beautiful, and the pair went abroad at sunrise. They sailed, however, far out to sea, and along the coast; ere any desire for fishing was shown by the lady. The water was not favorable, she said, at one place, and then she declared that she had no fancy on this morning for the exercise. Sir George was rather pleased with this disinclination, which was owing, he flattered himself, to her being absorbed by his own conversation; and she, on her part, seemed only to think of charming him by sweet discourse. At length a slight shower fell, and the baroness asked her lover to enter a small rude cabin, where a glass of wine and cakes were offered to him. Here the pair sat hour after hour, the lady enchanting her lover with talk that caused him to forget all but her present self. At length he pulled out his watch, and started up. "What!" cried he, "the day is far advanced, and I don't think they have put about!" The wind, too, was blowing nearly direct from the coast. "Come, madam, if you wish to fish at all to-day, it is surely time to begin."

The answer startled the poor baronet. "I have angled," said she, quietly; "and, what is more, I have caught my fish."

"What fish have you caught?"

"Twenty thousand pounds!" answered the lady with coolness. Sir George grew pale, and stepped hurriedly on deck.

"Destruction!" cried he, as soon as he had looked around. "Put about instantly, pilot, that is Margate! we are off England!"

"Exactly so, Sir George," said the lady at his back. He turned and looked at her.

"Your purpose, then, is to take me"—

"To London, Sir George," said the lady, interrupting him with calmness, though a gratified flush was on her cheek. Sir George turned to the sailors:

"My purse!" said he; "twenty-five louis for you if you put about for Boulogne!"

"Twenty-five louis!" said the lady disdainfully, "when twenty thousand pounds are in the other scale?"

"Barbarous, treacherous woman!" cried the infuriated baronet, as he looked around with an eye that threatened peril to all if he had means to inflict it; but the baroness gave a signal, and in an instant his arms were pinned to his side by two pair of brawny arms. The baronet struggled, but in vain; a cord was produced, and he was only saved from the ignominy of being bound, by giving his assurance that he would remain in quiet durance in the cabin. It seemed to him that he had nothing for it but to submit.

Sir George, reduced to this condition, looked with indignation at his captor. She had shocked the sailors for hardness in their usage of him, but otherwise she expressed no visible emotion. "Betrayed by you! you, whom I loved so much!"

"You love me?"

"Yes, well you know it!" answered Sir George. "Since you are an adventuress, cruel woman, would not my whole fortune, with my hand, have better paid you than a miserable hire? The lady spoke not in reply, and Sir George also had a scornful silence from that moment until he landed in the Thames. He was here put into the hands of the sailors, and conducted to a hotel, on giving his solemn promise that he would not attempt to escape. Believing all to be lost in any case, he was glad to be relieved from the confinement of a jail, though it might be but till his creditors were warned of his capture.

It was night when this landing in the Thames took place. Sir George spent a wretched night, moaning over that fate which conscience told him was not unmerited. In the morning he drew up an act, briefly giving up all to his creditors. He had scarcely finished this when a visitor was announced. It was his betrayer, the baroness.

"Wretched woman! what seek you?" said he sternly. "Is not your task done? I have now to do with others."

"With none but you," said the lady in a low voice, and with a timidity of manner most unlike her previous deportment.

"What do you mean, madam?" asked Sir George?

"I am your sole creditor," said the lady; and she placed in his hands some papers which he at once saw to be his own redeemed bonds. He looked up in amazement. "You had a cousin once, Sir George," said the lady with her eyes on the floor.

"I had—Anne Fulton," said Sir George; "we were playmates in childhood."

"She went abroad; when a mere child, with her family, continued the lady.

"She did," said the baronet; "and, I have heard, was married to a very wealthy planter in this island where they settled. It pained me to hear it, for we loved each other even when infants."

"She wedded against her will, continued the lady, "for she too remembers old days. She is now a widow." A light had been gradually breaking upon Sir George's mind. He started hastily forward and took hold of the lady's hand almost throwing himself at her feet.

"You are ——"

"I am your cousin Anne," said the lady.

It is needless to carry out the tale beyond this point when the imagination of the reader can do all that remains to be done. The lady returned to England a rich widow; had learned the situation and embarrassments of her well remembered cousin; had seen him at Boulogne; had contrived the overturn at his door and made his acquaintance.

She only thought of the fishing scheme through a spice of romance in her temperament, and that she might get him to England, where she might have his debts paid. They wedded and lived happily, like all lovers in stories; and we wish all were as true as the present one.

NEW HEADS FOR THE LADIES.—An effort is being made on the part of certain leading ladies in fashionable circles in this city, to bring in a new style of wearing the hair. They are proceeding on the principle that beauty unadorned is adorned the most, and hence chignons, rats, waterfalls, hair pins, bands and other excrescences with which it is customary to lumber up the head and rot the hair, are to be discarded. The hair, in short, is to be worn just as nature made it, hanging loosely over the shoulders, or flowing down gracefully behind. This mode, of course, will be stoutly resisted by such of the dear creatures as nature has not given a bountiful supply of head covering, but, nevertheless, it is believed the experiment will be a success when once it has a fair trial. The obignon makers and the perukers are turning up their noses at the very suggestion, but the disinterestedness of their motives is perfectly understood. The feeling seems to be that, as our mothers, wives, sisters and daughters are absolutely compelled, just now, to wear other people's hair or be out of the fashion, it is about time that some of the sex had sufficient moral courage to show how their own hair can be worn, and how, therefore, the feminine caput can be made to look, not the hideous humpy-dumpy it now is, but a "thing of beauty," if not a "joy forever."—New York Sun.

One of the interesting buildings in the great gardens of the Exposition contains a collection of models illustrative of the series of works on the much-talked of Suez Canal, with stuffed specimens of various creeping, crawling and flying things now existing in that vicinity, fossils and curious exhumations of all sorts. It is now fifteen years since the French began to seriously agitate this project, although they have been at work not quite eight, with a capital of $40,000,000. It is at present about one-third finished; and one-half the length is excavated, and that only a little more than a third of its future width, while the depth, which is to be twenty-six feet, now averages only seven; but all the preliminary works of surveys, plans, estimates, &c., are of course complete.

The Massachusetts Legislature incorporated an association, consisting of Samuel Bowles, William Stowe and others, as the Springfield Athenæum and Gallery of Arts, Springfield, for the purpose of constructing a hall for public use and a room to be used as a depository for pictures and other subjects of art. The corporation's capital stock is to be $100,000, in one hundred shares, and it may hold real estate to the amount of $75,000.

The New York papers mention that the first consignment of new wheat from the South has reached that city. They add that Southern millers have made such contracts for the new wheat that they will be able to sell handsome family flour in New York for thirteen dollars a barrel. The price of flour must tend downwards, as the prospects of a most bountiful harvest of wheat in all parts of the country multiply daily.

The mysterious mission of the United States steamer Gettysburg to the West Indies, has resulted in a simple treaty of amity, commerce, &c., with the Dominican Republic. It is nothing more or less than the stereotyped formality which we have gone through with every State, big and little, in the entire circle of American powers.

A man who can't swim may keep his head above water by tying his handkerchief around his hat, placing the hat top downwards in the water and resting his chin on it. All persons before they fall into the water are advised to prepare their hats in this way.

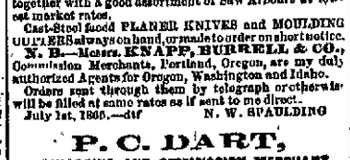
LEFFEL'S

AMERICAN DOUBLE TURBINE



THESE WHEELS, unequaled and unrivaled in the United States or the world, have been fully tested on this coast, more than forty being in use at this date, driving all kinds of machinery, Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills, Woolen Factories, &c., &c.

On account of the late calamity to the OREGON IRON WORKS we have for a few Wheels, but of these alone we have a good supply, therefore those contemplating using this Wheel need not be disappointed, but forward their order at once, accompanied with the CASH, which we now need more than the Wheels.

We cheerfully refer to all using our wheels, and are assured that all will affirm that our wheels accomplish all and even more than we claim for them. Address
